My role in Linen

I was tasked as a full-time full-stack developer responsible for designing and building the entire application. I had the freedom to choose the technologies and frameworks for most aspects of the project, leading me to select Laravel for the backend and React with MUI for the frontend. However, certain features and packages are subject to a confidentiality agreement with the client, which prevents me from disclosing further details beyond what I've mentioned above.

My responsibilities

- Comprehensive project planning from inception to completion, including considerations for technologies and frameworks, establishing continuous delivery processes, implementing bug-fixing procedures, utilizing version control (GIT), and addressing other relevant aspects.
- I will convert the project requirements into smaller tasks and assign deadlines to myself.
- Collect and assess client feedback.
- Verify and deploy the application.
- Integrate software components and third-party programs, such as a payment gateway.

Challenging part

- Automation script
 - Why – Without well-written documentation, I cannot create a better script. Any unauthorized data extraction, such as web scraping, would not only lead to permanent account termination but could also result in legal consequences.
 - How I overcame – In the absence of comprehensive documentation, I had no alternative but to rely on their limited documentation (provided as a Word file) and thoroughly examine their live system to gain an understanding of how their system operates. Over time, I successfully developed a script that adhered to legal guidelines and was permissible within their framework.

- Create email templates
 - Why – The client has requested the development of a basic email template creation tool without the use of additional packages.
 - How I overcome this – I began by creating small components for the tool, including features like images, titles, paragraphs, and columns. Then, I transformed these components into plain HTML and CSS, considering browser compatibility throughout the process. The outcome was a responsive email template that functions effectively on all major web browsers.
- Listings Map
 - Why – A large volume of listings will be returned for a specific location, and I need to display a pin marker for each listing using the Google Maps API in a map view.
 - How I overcome – Given the substantial volume of data, I recommended to the client that we initially display a limited number of listings to the user. Meanwhile, I proposed running the script in the background to prevent users from encountering delays or waiting for loading. Additionally, I suggested optimizing the Google Maps API usage for cost efficiency.

Key points that I've used to make this project successful

- Break down the requirements into smaller tasks.
- Divide the user interface into smaller components to enhance reusability.
- Adhere to and implement the best coding practices and standards, such as ECMAScript, PSR (PHP Standards Recommendations), and the DRY (Don't Repeat Yourself) principle.
- Continuously assess the client's feedback whenever a task or feature is completed.
- Provide clients with the freedom to make decisions and choices, rather than imposing my decisions on them.
- Offer advice and suggestions to the client for improvement, including new features, enhancements to existing features, and UI/UX ideas.
